The Waterpark Adventure

It was finally summer break, Henry and his family were taking their annual trip to Splash Park, the largest waterpark in the state of Florida. He went with his family at the start of every summer. Henry couldn't wait for this summer in particular, because he was finally going to be tall enough to ride the largest waterslide called, "The Plunge." As Henry drove up to Splash Park with his family, he could see "The Plunge" looming overhead in the waterpark.

"Oh wow," Henry thought to himself, "That looks much larger than it did last year!"

Tall Tales
Tall tales...
are mostly fictional stories.
take place during history
stretch the truth and have exaggerated details.
are about people who are larger than life.
have characters that have super human powers.
have problems that are solved in funny ways.
To recount a tall tale, ask yourself:
Who are the characters? What is the setting?
in the beginning, middle, and end?

Point of View

Who is telling the story? Sometimes the narrator is a character in the story. Sometimes the narrator is outside of the story.

Characters have different thoughts and feelings. This means characters have different points of view.

ASK YOURSELF:

1. What does character one think or feel about what happened? Why does he or she feel this way?
2. What does character two think or feel about what happened? Why does he or she feel this way?

would you feel in the same situation?
