Let's Read!

Read the adapted Aesop's fable "The Ants and the Grasshopper." Think about how this fable relates to the story "The Three Little Pigs."

One bright day in September, the Ant family was busy working, drying out the grain they had stored up during the summer. Suddenly, a starving Grasshopper came up. He was carrying a fiddle and humbly begged for a bite to eat.

"What!" cried the Ants in surprise, "haven't you stored anything away for the winter? What in the world were you doing all last summer?"

"I didn't have time to store up any food," whined the Grasshopper. "I was so busy making music that before I knew it the summer was gone."

The ants were shocked. They could not believe the Grasshopper was unprepared.

"Making music, were you?" they cried. "Very well; now dance!" And they turned their backs on the Grasshopper and went on with their work.

COMPARE & CONTRAST

themes and topics

Stories often have similar themes, or lessons.

Good readers compare and contrast topics, events, and themes in traditional literature. Stories with similar themes may have similar characters and events, as well. Different authors may approach the themes or topics in their own ways.

Comparing and contrasting similar stories can help you learn about the genre or cultures the stories belong to.

Common themes include:

- Good vs. Evil
- Courage
- Acceptance
- Honesty
- Kindness
- Loyalty
- Perseverance
- Quest

Ask Yourself:

1. What is the topic or subject of each story?
2. How is the pattern of events similar and different in both stories?
3. How are the characters similar and different in both stories?
4. What lesson does the main character learn in each story?
5. What does this teach me about the culture or country the story originated in?

The Kingdom of the Pink Dolphins
Compare & Contrast Theme
The Legend of Urashima Taro

Long ago, on the banks of the Napo River in Peru, there lived a young fisherman. He grew up listening to his grandmother tell stories about the magical pink dolphins that lived in the river. These dolphins were called the bufeo colorado by the people of his village. It was said that they could change their shape. They would sometimes appear in front of a villager as a beautiful man or woman. Then they would take the villager to the underwater kingdom of Encante. It was said that this kingdom was a paradise no human could ever dream of. However, no human had ever returned from it.
The young fisherman was not afraid of the stories. Every morning, when he went out on his boat to fish, he hoped to see one of the strange and wonderful pink dolphins.
One terrible morning, the young fisherman's boat returned empty to the shore. His mother cried, believing that he had drowned, but his grandmother knew better. She was sure that he had been taken to the underwater kingdom by the bufeo colorado.

Long ago, there lived a ferocious tiger that stalked a small Korean village. The people of the village were so scared that they didn't leave their houses. Something had to be done, so the village elders met to devise a plan.
The village elders discussed the situation in great lengths until they finally had a plan. They would set a trap for the tiger by digging deep holes around the village, and then they would fill each hole with meat for bait and cover the hole with branches.
Everyone in the village helped build the traps, and every family spared a little meat to place inside the traps. Finally, everyone went to their houses to await the troublesome tiger.
The following morning, the village chief's son journeyed to the village from the city. As he approached the village, he heard the frightening roar of the tiger, so he carefully investigated the hole that the sound was coming from. There was the tiger, roaring miserably.
"Please help me out of here, or I'll die of starvation! I will forever be in your debt," said the tiger.
The young man replied, "You would surely eat me if you were free!"
"I promise that I will not eat you," replied the cunning tiger.
The young man was convinced, so he found a long

Hansel and Gretel

Origin: Germany

Long ago, a woodcutter and his two children, a boy named Hansel and a girl named Gretel, lived in a great forest. After Hansel and Gretel's mother died, the woodcutter fell in love with another woman and remarried. The children's new stepmother was jealous because the woodcutter gave his children a lot of attention, and she grew resentful of them.

The family was very poor and had no food to eat. One evening when they were out of food, the callous stepmother argued that they must take the children into the forest and abandon them. The woodcutter refused because he loved his children, but his wife argued with him until he finally agreed.

The next morning, the stepmother gave each of the children a little piece of bread, and they all set out for the forest.

When they reached the middle of the forest, the stepmother said, "Just sit here, and when you are tired, you may sleep. We are going into the forest to cut wood. When we are done, we will come fetch you."

Hansel and Gretel followed the instructions as they ate their bread and fell asleep. When they awoke, no one had come for them, so they walked the whole night and all of the next day, too. They were very hungry and tired, and they decided to sleep beneath a tree.

Days later, the children came across a little house that was built of bread and covered with cakes. The entire house was made of food. The windows were even made of clear sugar.

When the children began to feast on the delicious house, they heard a soft voice cry from the house, "Nibble, nibble, gnaw, who is nibbling at my little house?"

The children answered, "the wind, the wind, the heaven-born wind," and went on eating.

Suddenly, as the door opened, a wrinkled face belonging to an old woman emerged.

The old woman crackled, "Oh, you dear children. Do come in, and stay with me so that no harm shall come to you.

The children followed the old woman into her little house, and she fed them milk and pancakes with sugar. Afterward, Hansel and Gretel went to sleep in two warm beds, thinking that they were in heaven.

TEST: Ra the Egyptian Sun God

Origin: Egypt

Before there was land, there was one body of water called Nun. Nun was powerful and magical. One day, a glittering egg emerged from the sea. The egg hatched, and Ra was born. Sun spread across his body and gave him power. Ra created all other living things by speaking their secret names. The sight of the beauty that Ra witnessed brought him to tears. His tears fell to the earth, and humans were born.

Ra is the most important Egyptian God. Ra formed the world and is the ruler of all created. He rules the earth, sky, and underworld.

Ra is born each day in the east, and then he sails across the sky in a boat for twelve hours. Many other gods accompany Ra through his journey, including Horus, god of the sky, who is his captain. At the end of each day, Ra dies in the west. Therefore, the west bank of the Nile, where the pyramids are, is the side of the dead. As Ra dies, the sun sets below the horizon.

At night, Ra goes to the underworld and leaves the moon in his place to give light to the world. Khonsu is the moon god. In Ra's absence, Khonsu travels across the world to guide people.

At night, Ra travels through the underworld and fights Apep, the snake demon. By sunrise, Ra has defeated Apep and once more goes on his journey across the sky.

For Egyptians, the sun is a source of life that gives them energy, light, and warmth. Without the sun, crops could not grow. This is why the god Ra holds such a significance to the people.

Most people at school never realized how expensive it could be to a baby, but they all wanted to help Mrs. Lamb, their beloved ian. The parents organized a big festival with a basket raffle. Each contributed to make a prize basket to donate. Parents, teachers, and elped decorate, bake treats, and spread the word. In the end, the raised more than five thousand dollars.

"The only way I'm going to get that gaming system is to buy it myself," Mario thought.

He wasn't the type to give up easily, so the three-hundred-dollar price tag didn't deter him. He got busy printing up flyers advertising his services. In summer he mowed lawns, in fall he raked leaves, and in winter he shoveled snow. It took months, but by the end of January he had almost enough to buy the gaming system.

Passage 1

Gleefully, King Midas touched everything in sight, turning chairs and rugs to solid gold with the flick of a finger. The trouble began when the wealthy king sat down for dinner. He grasped a chicken leg, which turned to gold in his hand. He brought a potato to his mouth using a fork, but it turned to gold when it touched his teeth.

"How will I be able to eat?" he wailed. "If I can't eat, I'll starve and die!"

Passage 2

The greedy king insisted on having this rare and expensive cloth for his robe. Day after day, the swindlers pretended to weave cloth. Everyone, including the king, pretended to see the cloth because they didn't want to be seen as unintelligent.

At last, the day came for the king to don his new robe. He stripped down to his underwear and pretended to slip into the robe. Then he marched out before the entire kingdom.

What is the biggest difference between Passage 1 and Passage 2?

- We have to face the difficulties in life bravely.
- The things we wish for don't always turn out the way we expect.
- The most important thing is to be who you are on the inside.
- Before you move to a new place, you should learn all about it.
