"Why would you help me?" Kadeem asked.

"Because the larger robots are out of control," the robot said. "The smaller robots-of which there are many-are ready to take the power from the larger robots, but we need help. Human help. My goal is to create an alliance between smaller robots and humans. Together we will deactivate the larger robots, split them up for parts, and never worry about them again."

Kadeem liked the sound of that. He'd planned to go solo, but a rebellion called for more numbers. Plus, if there was a chance he could rescue Jamal, he was taking the opportunity.

"Okay. I'll come with you," he said. "There was also a group that stopped by here earlier. They already had rebellion on their minds."

"Excellent." The robot led Kadeem out of the restaurant where at least five dozen smaller robots waited. "Welcome to the team. Let us take back what the larger robots have stolen from us all-freedom."
