She finished just as the oven-timer beep sounded, signaling the end of the eight hours.

The judges oohed and aahed over all of the beautiful cakes, but when they got to Praveena's, they were actually speechless. After looking at her cake from every angle and then finally tasting it, the judges declared her the winner of this first round. Fueled by that win, Praveena went on to slay in the next rounds, infusing each cake with a bit of Indian culture.

In the final round, the judges unanimously declared her the winner, awarding her a cash prize and one of Chef Dennis' cookbooks. When asked how long she'd been a baker, Praveena proudly said, "Ever since I made dirt cakes and mud pies with my best friend, Max."

"I knew you would be the winner," Max said when she got home. "And we'll definitely need Indian-inspired desserts when we open our own bakery someday."
